English Translation of Gajendra Thakur's Maithili Novel Sahasrabadhani translated into English by Smt. Jyoti Jha Chaudhary

It was the impact of busy life that her son was getting any time to think only when he was on bed. Aaruni was working in a paper printing press before being successful in the business. He agreed to work on percentage in stead of salary with the owner of the press who was also his friend. After getting customer's order he used to make binding and printing work done. He had started his own printing work gradually. Some people used to print material in his press and then they were selling it outside so Aaruni applied a trick. He started including a calendar with his press name printed on it in each bundle. When the ultimate consumers came to know that they were giving place for the mediator unnecessarily then they started contacting Aaruni. Aaruni was hardly hearing his name at his home. The name printed on the book was name of a company and he never found that name very associable. His father died because of crookedness of the world but by virtue of his intelligent brain he was winning the battle of business.

The name Aaruni was heard many times after mother came. When his friends used to narrate the stories of success of Aaruni in business to his mother Aaruni used to feel very shy and he always tried to divert the topic.

His mother was determined to arrange his marriage. When his mother became crabby then he was very uncomfortable like it was his monopoly to be stubborn. But mother was sure that her son was changed to be practical and no crabbier. On the other hand Aaruni thought that it was time to pay as he used to trouble his parents in his childhood because of his obstinate nature. Marrige then child.....Mother saw the face of her husband in her grandson. Her son was turned very practical and adjustable before death of her husband. But now it would not continue. Her grandson would not believe in compromise. He would do whatever his grandfather and father desired to do and couldn't. So she kept her grandson's name as a combination of her husband's name and son's name that was Aaruni Nand. Again the same sequence of life begun..........beginning of study with the same Shloka – Sate Bhavatu Supreeta........... Her son was taught by her husband, she was busy in looking after her family in that time but currently her daughter-in-law was looking after domestic works and son was too busy to give time to child so she started teaching her grandson.

"Utpatsyet himam kopi samandharma kalohyam nirvadhir vipula cha prithvi"

The earth is very big and time is endless so I have faith that someone will make my efforts fruitful.

Aaruni felt an unusual distance from his mother. He was little bit ill and lost in analysing his past while studying alone in an apartment near the Woodland Nursing Home. He was young enough to be eligible in sit in the competitive exams for the government job so he sat in exams and very soon he became the Central Government's grade 'B' officer wearing uniform. Even if it was not class one job mother was happy that he left business and joined a government job.

"Come, have some food, you cannot live like that", his younger maternal uncle admonished him. The rituals of funeral were completed. It was time to recrudesce to profession as well as family life.

November, 1995:

Aaruni with complete shaved head returned to Patna via Darbhanga by bus. He confronted many hawkers on the bus. First of all one bookseller came and distribute many books among the travellers. He narrated names and qualities of the books with a few rhyming sentences- stories, first aid tips, foolan devi, manohar pothi etc. Some of his books were bought by the passengers after some bargaining and rest were collected by the seller. While returning he had some argument with the bus conductor. Next was inventor of lemon juice extractor who demonstrated his instrument and left the bus after having argument with the bus conductor. The comb seller, pen seller, schrew seller etc. visited the bus and left as well.
